We have no relationship with advertisers, products, or services discussed at this website. We discuss how to diagnose problems with the water pump control and how to fix them by correcting an underlying problem, by replacing a bad pressure control switch, or by replacing switch parts such as bad contacts or diaphragm. Schneider Electric USA All are diaphragm actuated. It has higher electrical ratings for direct control of motors in The Type G switch is diaphragm actuated and has contacts that My well pump tank make a noise after the tank begins to fill again. The pressure control works fine. If you hear air gurgling then there may be a leak in your well line causing the pump to also send air into the tank. See The pressure will drop to zero and we need to engage it in order to get the water working again. This also happens if we run the faucet in the tub or the washer. Thanks! It sounds as if the well pump is not keeping up with the water flow rate demand in the building. Or your well itself cannot keep up. The contacts close briefly, pump just starts to turn, then everything stops and pressure falls. I can start it with the manual switch and it will run fine. Any ideas Another possibility is that the switch contacts are burned. Today I noticed the pressure was not right then it finally had no pressure. While in the pump house I rebooted the power. The pump came on for about 10 seconds and then shut off again. What is the most likely problem. Pressure control switch capacitor etc. Thanks for your help Watch to see the pressure at which the pump cuts on. Then turn off water and watch to see the pressure at which the pump cuts off. A bad pressure tank can cause your pump to kick in and out repeatedly while running water. The other potential problem is the setting on the pressure switch itself.

If you haven't adjusted your pressure switch I would check the air pressure in your tank. If you press the valve down and get water, then you've most likely got a ruptured bladder in your tank. While testing with a VOM probe, I got a small spark and everything went from dead to working normally I think. At least the water is back on. The tank is a red AMTROL H2O W/O WATERWORKER 9015585 in a residential installation. I checked the gauge tube for clogs and it was clear, when I open the contact points, there is no spark, but there is power going to them, what am I missing Tel 8473972600, Fax 8479257500 Schneider Electric provides narrow differential switches including 620.
